PRICE CITY PUBLIC ANNOUNCEMENT

City Officials Engaged and Working to Help Residents Navigate COVID-19

Price, Utah—(March 24, 2020)—During these difficult times, City officials and staff are fully engaged in trying to help residents navigate the COVID-19 situation.

Price City is routinely briefed on what is happening on the local, state and federal levels, and is making every effort to pass that information along to residents. City officials strongly encourage everyone to follow established COVID-19 guidelines and procedures which are updated regularly here: <https://coronavirus.utah.gov>

Generally, city officials want to remind residents to practice social distancing, refrain from gatherings that include more than 10 people, be kind to others, and support local businesses.

City officials are continually evaluating economic conditions and working to ensure that the city remains on sound, financial footing and that critical services are not interrupted. “We have the right people in the right places doing the right things that will help us get through these challenging times,” stated Mayor Michael Kourianos. “We appreciate everything that our staff, and our government and private sector partners are doing to help us.”

City officials are keenly aware of the hardships facing local residents. To that end, Price City is prepared to work with households and businesses experiencing hardships due to COVID-19 with their utility bill arrangements.

For more information regarding potential utility bill arrangements, residents should contact the Price City Utilities Office. Residents are encouraged to call or use electronic services whenever possible.

Anyone coming into the office will be required to be respectful of social distancing. Staff has been instructed to only allow 1 person in the collection office at a time. In an effort to assure there is adequate staffing to answer calls and assist customers, the City is changing collection office hours of operation to 8am – 5pm.

“We are in a very fluid, uncertain and fast-moving situation,” noted Kourianos, “and we are working hard to make good decisions and implement best practices based on sound data and reliable information. We appreciate the understanding and support of our Price City community as we navigate through and out of these turbulent waters.”
